

How to describe an online journal with a title that doesn't match the print manifestation or the ISSN portal record

When cataloging online journals, especially non-US imprints or those published in foreign languages, the online presentation of the journals may differ from their print manifestations. However, the presence of an ISSN usually helps identify the work and clarify relationships between manifestations and expressions.

Generally speaking, when trying to identify the title proper, follow CCM 31.3.2 which states: "For electronic serials that have print manifestation equivalents, providing records that align with records for print manifestations is desirable due to the benefits this approach affords library users. Such alignment facilitates discovery when users rely on bibliographic data found in citations referring to print manifestations when formulating search terms. Record alignment also greatly enhances the usability of data (such as ISSNs and URLs) in knowledge bases and link resolvers. Title changes in the print manifestation of a serial are not always clearly identified when issues are mounted on the Web. Although the content of earlier (or later) titles is available on the website, it may be prominently identified by a different title, often the most recent. Where changes in the print title are not displayed prominently, it is preferable that a less prominent source be selected as the source of title."

When searching non-US imprints in the ISSN portal, be mindful that title changes for non-US imprints may not follow CONSER standards.

Example 1: Liaudies kultura/Folk Culture

When you search the ISSN portal, the title proper doesn't match the online version in hand. The print version record supports data in the ISSN portal.

Online version: English title only. No evidence of Lithuanian title. Text of articles are in Lithuanian. CONSER authenticated print record exists in OCLC bearing Lithuanian title.

Example 3: Scientific paper. Series D. Animal science (and earlier titles)

This online journal contains hidden title changes, parallel titles, and a change in language in 2013 bringing about a major change. No print records exist for any of the titles.

Online version: Latest title branding only with links to “past issues” and “archives”.
